In her first institutional solo show in the UK, Ilona Sagar presents Correspondence O, a new installation and exhibition exploring the history of the radical Pioneer Health Centre in Peckham and its subsequent conversion into a gated community. Sagar’s two-channel moving image installation presents the complex, changing landscape of public health and the social shift towards a more egocentric, user-focused and technology-infused understanding of wellness. The Pioneer Health Centre in south London was founded in 1926 in response to rising public concern over the health of working class people and an increasing interest in preventative social medicine. The Centre closed in 1950 and its influence and clubs. The Centre closed in 1950 and its influence and clubs. The Centre closed in 1950 and its influence and clubs. The Centre closed in 1950...
